Grant/sustain in part. The Court will sustain the objection as to $24,513.19 of the total claim amount of $49,513.19 in proof of claim no. 17-1, leaving a balance of $25,000.00 as of January 29, 2013. Payments with respect to proof of claim no. 17-1 from and after January 29, 2013, if any, reduce the claim further through satisfaction. Neither the debtors nor the chapter 13 trustee have made a sufficient showing as to whether claim no. 1-1 of Real Time Resolutions, Inc. is a claim duplicative of claim no. 17-1 or, alternatively, is a claim by a lender who is senior to claim no. 17-1 (in other words, is claim no. 1-1 a senior lien on the property?). For these reason the Court overrules the chapter 13 trustee's request for clarifying language without prejudice.

[Tele. appr., Holly O. Roark, repr., Debbie Anspach]

Docket 416

Tentative Ruling:

APPEARANCES REQUIRED.

The Court confirmed Debtor's Amended Chapter 13 Plan, filed October 9, 2014 (the "Plan") by order entered March 31, 2015 (the "Confirmation Order"). The Plan as filed contained two separate provisions requiring payment of the attorney's fees of Debtor's counsel, Holly Roark, to be paid first, ahead of other holders of administrative claims. Section V(F) of the Plan, entitled "Miscellaneous Provisions," provided "Holly Roark—Debtor's attorney's fees to be paid first. RARA filed. Fee applications to be filed. See attachment." The referenced attachment stated that Ms.

Roark's fees of $28,543 were to be paid first and fees of special counsel (Guenther Richter, although he is not specifically named in the attachment) were to be paid second.

In addition to these provisions, asterisked entries on page 4 of the Plan also stated that Ms. Roark's fees (including those approved in supplemental fee applications) were to be paid first and special counsel fees were to be paid second.

The Confirmation Order, which the Court views as controlling over potentially conflicting provisions in the Plan, provides in Section 3(e), entitled "Interlineations," in material part as follows: "Section V., paragraph F. Miscellaneous provision is hereby stricken. Debtor(s)' attorney reserves the right to file a fee application for preconfirmation legal services."

Amrane Cohen, chapter 13 trustee (the "Trustee"), commenced distributions required under the Plan and has been paying Ms. Roark first for well over 18 months.

The Trustee and the Debtor now disagree on whether Ms. Roark and Guenther Richter are entitled to be paid first, prior to payments to holders of other administrative expense claims. The Trustee contends they are not entitled to be paid first, the Debtor contends that they are.

The Debtor's attorneys certainly have no entitlement to be paid first under Plan Paragraph V(F) because that provision was expressly stricken under Section 3(e) of the Confirmation Order. However, similar provisions regarding the right to be paid first appear on page 4 of the Plan (as stated above), and these provisions were not stricken in the Confirmation Order. The Trustee argues that the provisions on page 4 should not be given effect because they violate Local Bankruptcy Rule ("LBR") 9009-1(b)(4)(A), which prohibits alteration of form orders. Juxtaposed to this rule is LBR 9009-1(b)(4)(B), which expressly permits "[l]anguage or provisions necessary to complete a form may be provided in relevant sections of a form or attached as a clearly marked supplement to a form."

The Court determines that these LBR provisions, considered together, are intended to prevent surreptitious altering of a form by removing actual language in a form order or by adding words within already existing words in the form order. These types of changes are difficult for a court or parties in interest to spot. Much easier to spot is additional language of the type referred to in LBR 9009-1(b)(4)(B) because this language often appears in an attachment. Here, the additional language appearing on page 4 of the Plan does not appear on an attachment but nevertheless falls within the permissive zone of LBR 9009-1(b)(4)(B) because it is clearly marked by asterisks and is set forth below the form language in two different font sizes. Clearly, it is not in any way a surreptitious alteration of the form and, indeed, stands out like a sore thumb. For these reasons, the Court rejects the Trustee's argument that the additions on page 4 of the Plan violate LBR 9009-1(b)(4)(A). These additions meet the requirements of LBR 9009-1(b)(4)(B) because, among other things, they are "necessary to complete a form" – necessary because these are terms the parties have agreed to and are not set forth in the form plan itself. The Court is not so hidebound and form-obsessed that it would permit clearly marked alterations of the form plan under Plan paragraph V(F) but prohibit them elsewhere in the Plan.

Next, the Court turns to the interpretation of the Plan page 4 provisions with the Plan V(F) provisions. The latter provisions were stricken in the Confirmation Order, but the former are not stricken. Was this simply a scrivener's error, or is there rhyme and reason to the striking of the Plan V(F) provisions? Generally speaking, legal documents ought not to be redundant. Redundancy can create enormous legal problems and distort the true intentions of parties, such as when an ill-informed person manually signs a second "copy" of a promissory note and thereby opens himself up to the allegation that he owes twice the amount of money he actually borrowed. The Court concludes that the striking of V(F) is intended to eliminate the redundancy with the Plan page 4 provisions because they contain much the same language.

This conclusion is greatly strengthened by the pattern and practice of the parties. For over 18 months the Trustee has applied the Plan and Confirmation Order in precisely the manner argued for by the Debtor, namely, the Trustee has been paying Ms. Roark first.

The Trustee next contends that the "pay first" provision violates 11 U.S.C. § 1322(a)(3)'s requirement that the plan "shall provide the same treatment for each claim within a particular class." Here, the Plan provides that all Class 1 claims are to be paid in full. This is "same treatment" within the meaning of section 1322(a)(3). ("Same treatment" is a flexible concept. Interpreted too strictly, it would unduly hamper trustees and elevate form over substance. For example, the Court will not interpret the "same treatment" requirement so strictly as to require all checks to claimants to be deposited in the U.S. Mail at precisely the same moment or to forbid chapter 13 trustees from using the U.S. Mail to pay some claimants and to use bank-transfer ACH-type money transmittals to pay other claimants). However, more to the point is that the Plan separately classifies Ms. Roark's claim in Class 1(a)(2).

The Court agrees with the Trustee that requiring the Trustee to make a special disbursement is burdensome.

For these reasons, the Court grants the motion in part. The Trustee is ordered to comply with the Plan and pay Ms. Roark and Mr. Richter first but may pay them as part of an ordinary course distribution. A special disbursement is not required.
